I love orgasms. Big ones, small ones, quick ones, slow ones, any sort at all. Most of my sexual life has been geared towards this elusive and slippery fulfilment, and extensive research has exposed a weakness for certain techniques and appendages. However, my main aim in life is to achieve that which is said to be impossible. Some say it does not exist. Some say it was a boastful myth created to demonstrate sexual prowess. Others sing its praises and blush deeply at the mere mention of its name. To what do I refer? Yes, you've guessed. The Multiple Orgasm. Clitoral and vaginal orgasms combined and multiplied infinitely. (Clitoral and vaginal being used as a crass anatomical way of trying to verbalize a real difference.

You can get a roaring solo orgasm from the skin of the fingertips, the breasts, the soles of the feet or the earlobes of a receptive woman.)

What is a multiple orgasm? According to one sex manual, "multiple orgasm comes easily to many if not all women if they are responsive enough and care to go on. Some women get one continuous series of orgasms with no single, big peak. Responsiveness is an unanalyzably subtle mixture of physiology, mood, culture, upbringing and having the partner you want." All very fine but how do you achieve them? Being a relaxed, cultured individual and having the woman I desire, what am I doing wrong? Have I wasted all these years lying prostrate across various surfaces while my lover licked, sucked and finger-fucked her way around my orifices to the strains of suitable mood inducing music (Janis Joplin singing Down On Me is a personal favourite).

Persistence and a taste for the adventurous (honey and ice cream - guaranteed chills and spills) has led me to the conclusion that while a never ending succession of orgasms is desirable, the reality is that some women get many orgasms - some so many that they merge and can't be pinpointed as a single event - and others like to savour the period of intense relaxation after each orgasm. The only technique worth trying is self-education through relaxed, gradual and private self-exploration. Masturbation and vibrators are known to produce sexual feelings in almost any woman. Once a stimulus has been discovered, whether solo or with your lover, incorporate it into your love-making and use it to the full. If you need a finger on the clitoris or genital kissing, use them fully. Establish your pattern, and if you haven't already, experiment with posture changes. (Swinging from the light fittings is not recommended.) Only trial will indicate which will work best, or at all. Always remember latex gloves, dental dams, cut up condoms and non-microwaveable clingfilm are part of the fun and a necessary accessory to fully enjoy safe sex.
